BICENTENARY OF THE ACCESSION OF HONORÉ V

The son of Prince Honoré IV and Louise d'Aumont, Duchess of Mazarin, Honoré V was born in Paris in 1778. Upon the first Restoration in 1814, Honoré V, then Hereditary Prince, was appointed a member of the Chamber of Peers by King Louis XVIII. He ruled over the Principality in his father's name from 1815, eventually succeeding him on 16 May 1819, and reigning until his death in 1841. He took a keen interest in legal matters, and considerably developed Monegasque law. Honoré V was a committed philanthropist, and also sought to diversify the Principality's economic resources.

CENTENARY OF THE CIESM

Founded a century ago, CIESM, also known as the Mediterranean Science Commission, plays a role that goes beyond merely providing support for research efforts. Covering a region torn by historic conflicts, CIESM represents a unique forum for scientific exchanges, peace and dialogue, bringing together marine researchers from across the Mediterranean using the latest technologies to understand, monitor and protect the sea. Today, with its multi-disciplinary network of 8,000 scientists working at almost 500 institutes, and with political support from its 23 member states, its independent analyses and recommendations are widely relied upon by national and international organisations.

NATIONAL SPECIES - ATLANTIC BLUEFIN TUNA

An emblematic Mediterranean species, the bluefin tuna Thunnus thynnus has been fished for over 7,000 years. It has come to symbolise the fragility of marine resources, threatened by uncurbed, unsustainable human activities. Bluefin tuna were heavily overfished in the early 1990s. The introduction of fishing quotas from 2008 has helped to reverse the decline. However, the increase in permitted catches for the period 2018-2020 raises the risk of overfishing once more.
